

PATCH

What makes this stool unique is its manufacture. The seat comprises three parts which are individually covered with leftover fabrics from our own production process. Each part has its own fabric, but they are all within one of seven specific colour scales. In other words, what your Patch is going to look like is governed by what leftover fabrics we have at the time. So you can never know precisely which textures or shades your Patch will have, only that it will be within the colour scale you have selected. In return, you obtain a highly unique piece of furniture, manufactured with consideration for our environment.
